To whom it may concern:

I have known Bill Line for several years and have found his keen grasp of statistics and extensive computer abilities allow him to consistently meet the needs, demands and goals of his clients. He utilizes his broad knowledge of business combined with the ability to accurately define problems, diagnose and analyze data.

I found Bill to be trustworthy, dependable, responsible and very supportive. He is also polite and patient and possesses a drive and discipline to achieve the results desired in an orderly and timely manner. He is adaptable and has the flexibility to change directions when appropriate.

I have also been impressed with Bill's organizational skills and ability to effectively interact with people. He is an articulate and concise communicator who quickly establishes and gains the respect of his clients and colleagues. He works well under pressure and is prompt and professional in his dealings with others.

In short, Bill is a statistician who utilizes his imagination and creativity, to produce quality results. I would recommend him as a person who is able to gather resources and information to provide quality direction in meeting client goals.
